Without the Children.

Y.

O the weary, solemn silence Of a house without the children; O the strange, oppressive stillness Where the children come no more': Ah! the longing of the sleepless For the soft arms of the children, Ah! the longing for the faces Peeping through the opening door-Faces gone for evermore !

Strange it is to wake at midnight And not hear the children breathing, Nothing but the old clock ticking, Ticking, ticking by the door. Strange to see the little dresses Hanging up there all the morning; And the gaiters -- ah ! their patter, We will hear it nevermore On our mirth-forsaken floor !

What is home without the children? 'Tis the earth without its verdure, And the sky without the sunshine; Life is withered to the core! So we'll leave this dreary desert. And we'll follow the Good Shepherd To the greener pastures vernal. Where the lambs have "gone before" With the Shepherd evermore !

O the weary, solemn silence Of a house without the children; O the strange, oppressive stillness Where the children come no more ! Ah ! the longing of the siee For the soft arms of the children; Ah! the longing for the faces Peeping through the opening door-Faces gone for evermore ! -" Babble-Brook Songs," by J. H. McNaughton.

VARIETY.

It is no uncommon thing that hot words produce

A policy of insurance is often rendered void by A stitch in the side, taken in time, may save nine

Chess play often ends as sword play always begins

What is the first thing a young lady looks for in church? The hims.

As a general rule, a fashionable beau, like a bow in the sky, can't make both ends meet.

The man who was "behind the times," proposes

At a young ladies' seminary in our city, a few days since, during an examination in history, not one of the most promising pupils was thus interrogated: "Mary, did Martin Luther die a natural death?" "No," was the prompt reply, "he was excommunicated by a bull?"

At a debating society the subject was-" Which is the sweetest production, a girl or a strawberry?" After continuing the argument for two nights, the meeting finally adjourned without coming to a conclusion-the older ones going for the strawberries, and the young ones for the girls.

"I say, landlord, that's a dirty towel for a man to wipe on." Landlord with a look of amazement, replied : " Well, you're mighty particular. Sixty or seventy of my boarders have wiped on that towel this morning, and you are the first one to find fault."

GOOD TASTE -Good taste is the " luminous shadow" of all the virtues. It is social discretion-it is intellectual kindness-it is external modesty and propriety-it is apparent unselfishness. It wounds no feelings-it infringes on no decorums-it respects all scruples. A man thus gifted even though he be not a wit, spreads a genial influence about him, from the trust he inspires. The stiff man can unbend, the cold man thaw, the fastidious can repose on him. No one is committed to more than he chooses-no ungenerous use is made of an unusual or transient impulse. Good taste is practical though not deep knowledge of character-it is perception of the distinctive points of every occasion? and thus it reconciles and harmonizes, where bad taste perpetuates differences and necessitates separations. And yet we by no means wish to make good taste a synonym either for virtue or intellect; it is rather that quality which sets off both at their best. It is an affair, in some degree, of social training-it is one aspect of knowledge of the world. Those who are little in general society-who confine themselves to family intercourse, or to that of a set or clique, whatever the position, whatever the intellectual or moral pretensions of that clique-are almost sure to fail in it in new scences. All persons of a single idea, engrossed by one object, are perpetually infringing on the rules of good taste. If they are religious, they are pragmatical and intolerant, regardless of sensibilities. If they are useful, they do their work with unnecessary fuss. If they are learned, or deep, or clever, they make these gifts unpopular. If they are grave, they are a check and restraint. They fail in every social crisis-in every difficulty they take the wrong way. They are forward when they ought to be retiring. There is no knowing where such people are -to what length an emergency or excited spirits will drive them. It is the cause of half the seeming injustice of society.

The man of bad taste cannot comprehend why things are not tolerated in him which are allowed in others. He is the last to see that the presence or absence of a correct taste makes the same practice or amusement agreeable without taking the manner of doing it into consideration. He is, therefore, forever grumbling at the inconsistencies and partialities of mankind. The fact is, every hinge with some people grates and creaks, at each turn jarring on sensitive nerves; while good taste is the oil which keeps the machinery of society, with the least wear and tear, noiselessly and profitably at work .- London Saturday Review.
